

Reflective Statements

Respond to each of the following questions with thoughtful response that addresses if you have achieved the learning

Reflective Question 1: Sociocultural perspectives understand writing and rhetoric as social activities always determined by context.

- To what extent has the reading, research, and writing you have completed as you have worked on your MA degree and/or PWC certificate? How has the capstone ePortfolio enhanced your understanding of sociocultural perspectives of writing and rhetoric?
 - In answering this question, please be sure to provide specific examples/projects/classes that draw upon scholarship you read or assignments you completed projects across your courses and/or other points in the program.

Reflective Question 2: The field of rhetoric and composition employs a wide range of research methods to engage in inquiry into rhetoric, writing, literacy and language. One component of research involves considering ethical concerns, including elements such as: consideration of researcher positionality, reciprocal relationships with community, responsible engagement with data, and alignment with IRB protocols.

- To what extent has the reading, research, and writing you have completed as you have worked on your degree/certificate? How has your thesis capstone ePortfolio enhanced your understanding of research methods used in our field?
- To what extent has this work enhanced your understanding of ethical research design and methods in writing and rhetoric?
 - In answering this question, please be sure to provide specific examples/projects/classes that draw upon scholarship you read or assignments you completed projects across your courses and/or other points in the program.

Reflective Question 3: “Multimodal genres” refers to artifacts that engage in multiple modes (visual, aural, written, and others, with a particular emphasis on digital genres) to communicate rhetorically.

- To what extent has the reading, research, and writing you have completed as you have worked on your degree/certificate? How has your capstone ePortfolio enhanced your understanding of ways in which people make meaning through the use of various kinds of texts (e.g. digital, print, and material)?
 - In answering this question, please be sure to provide specific examples/projects/classes that draw upon scholarship you read or assignments you completed projects across your courses and/or other points in the program.

Rubric

	Strong Evidence	Adequate Evidence	Limited or Weak Poor Evidence	Not applicable or no evidence
Question #1: To what extent have the readings, discussions, research, and/or writing enhanced your understanding of sociocultural perspectives in your foundational knowledge of the discipline of writing and rhetoric?	-articulates and demonstrates learning -provides an example of learning and connects it to self-growth -points to specific course content and explains how it facilitated growth -connects learning to past or future (transfer of knowledge)	-states that they've learned and possibly explains how -provides an example of change but may not connect it to self-growth -points to course content that facilitated growth -connects change to some experience	-resists reflection -does not provide examples of change or learning -vaguely refers to course content or does not refer to course content -discusses course learning in isolation
Question #2: To what extent have readings, discussions, research, and/or writing enhanced your understanding of ethical research design and methods in your foundational knowledge of the discipline of writing and rhetoric?	-articulates and demonstrates learning -provides an example of learning and connects it to self-growth -points to specific course content and explains how it facilitated growth -connects learning to past or future (transfer of knowledge)	-states that they've learned and possibly explains how -provides an example of change but may not connect it to self-growth -points to course content that facilitated growth -connects change to some experience	-resists reflection -does not provide examples of change or learning -vaguely refers to course content or does not refer to course content -discusses course learning in isolation
Question #3: To what extent have readings, discussions,	-articulates and demonstrates learning -provides an	-states that they've learned and possibly explains how	-resists reflection -does not provide research, and/or writing enhanced your understanding of analysis and composing of multimodal genres relevant to professional writing environments?	example of learning and connects it to self-growth -points to specific course content and explains how it facilitated growth -connects learning to past or future (transfer of knowledge)	-provides an example of change but may not connect it to self-growth -points to course content that facilitated growth -connects change to some experience	examples of change or learning -vaguely refers to course content or does not refer to course content -discusses course learning in isolation

--	---	--	--	--